What were the Fund costs for the last year?

(Based on a hypothetical $10,000 investment)

	Costs of a $10,000 investment	Costs paid as a percentage of a $10,000 investment
Class R6	$104	1.02%

Gross expense ratio as of the latest prospectus: 1.02%. See prospectus for any contractual or voluntary waivers; without a waiver, costs would have been higher.

How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

Class R6 shares of the Fund returned 3.67% for the period ended June 30, 2025. The Fund's broad-based index, the S&P 500® Index, returned 15.16% for the same period, while the Fund's additional, more narrowly based index, the Bloomberg Commodity Index, returned 5.77%.

The Fund, while producing a positive absolute return in the annual period, did not keep pace with the Bloomberg Commodity Index.

We invest in commodities using commodity-linked swaps and futures contracts and use a number of different strategies in an effort to maximize returns and manage risk. Among these, the Fund's roll enhancement strategy (which seeks to invest in contracts that expire further out the commodity curve than the subsequent month) was a key detractor. Most of the underperformance occurred in the fourth calendar quarter of 2024 and the span from April to mid-May of 2025. In both time periods, shorter-dated contracts outpaced the longer-term contracts in which we typically invest.

The Fund's tactical strategy (which focuses on the overall direction of commodity markets) detracted. The portfolio averaged 88% market exposure during the period, which hurt results at a time in which commodity prices rose. However, this aspect of our approach also helped cushion the market's downside during periods of volatility.

The Fund's relative value strategy (a proprietary quantitative methodology that determines the commodity sector weightings relative to the Fund's additional benchmark) made a positive contribution to performance. An overweight in agriculture, an underweight in energy, and an overweight in gold contributed, as did our shifts in base metals.

We hold the remainder of the Fund's investments in a fixed-income portfolio, some of which serves as collateral for the swaps and futures contracts. The fixed-income positions helped results thanks to the contribution from yield and positive performance from holdings in corporate bonds.

We also sought to adjust the portfolio's positioning to take advantage of short-term market dislocations in an opportunistic fashion. In the aggregate, our decisions in this area helped results. Trades in gold, energy, and base metals all contributed, offsetting a weaker showing in agriculture and silver.

Fund Performance

Cumulative Growth of an Assumed $10,000 Investment

S&P 500® Index is a capitalization weighted index of 500 stocks. The index is designed to measure performance of the broad domestic economy through changes in the aggregate market value of 500 stocks representing all major industries.

The S&P 500® Index replaces the Bloomberg Commodity Index as the Fund's broad-based index in compliance with updated regulatory requirements.

Bloomberg Commodity Index is made up of 23 exchange-traded futures on physical commodities, representing 21 commodities which are weighted to account for economic significance and market liquidity.

The Bloomberg Commodity Index is a more narrowly based index that reflects the market sector in which the Fund invests.

Index returns do not reflect any fees or expenses and it is not possible to invest directly into an index.

The Fund invests in commodity-linked derivatives which may subject the Fund to special risks. Market price movements or regulatory and economic changes will have a significant impact on the Fund's performance. Investing in derivatives entails special risks relating to liquidity, leverage and credit that may reduce returns and/or increase volatility. Any fund that concentrates in a particular segment of the market will generally be more volatile than a fund that invests more broadly. Bond investments are subject to interest-rate, credit, liquidity and market risks to varying degrees. When interest rates rise, bond prices generally fall. Credit risk refers to the ability of an issuer to make timely payments of principal and interest. Investing in foreign securities presents certain risks, such as currency fluctuations, political and economic changes, and market risks. Emerging markets tend to be more volatile and less liquid than the markets of more mature economies, and generally have less diverse and less mature economic structures and less stable political systems than those of developed countries. A counterparty with whom the Fund does business may decline in financial health and become unable to honor its commitments, which could cause losses for the Fund. The Fund may lend securities to approved institutions. Please read the prospectus for details.
