How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

Class R6 shares of the Fund returned 23.64% for the period ended October 31, 2025. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index, returned 27.91% for the same period.

Stock selection was the primary reason for the Fund's underperformance relative to the MSCI Emerging Markets Index. Selection in China had the largest adverse impact on results at the country level. The consumer electronics and electric vehicle producer Xiaomi Corp. (2.1%), which came under pressure from safety concerns and weak global auto sales, was the largest detractor in both China and the portfolio as a whole. Positions in BYD Co., Ltd. (1.5%), Pop Mart International Group Ltd. (1.0%), and Trip.com Group Ltd.* also detracted from relative performance in China. Selection in Brazil further weighed on relative performance, due in part to positions in the biofuel company Cosan Industria e Comercio SA* and the drug store chain Raia Drogasil SA (0.8%). Outside of China and Brazil, the Kazakhstan-based financial technology company Kaspi.KZ JSC* and the Eastern European parcel delivery firm InPost SA (0.8%) were key detractors. Stock selection in Indonesia and Turkey also detracted, as did overweights in the two countries. An underweight in South Korea hurt relative performance, as well.

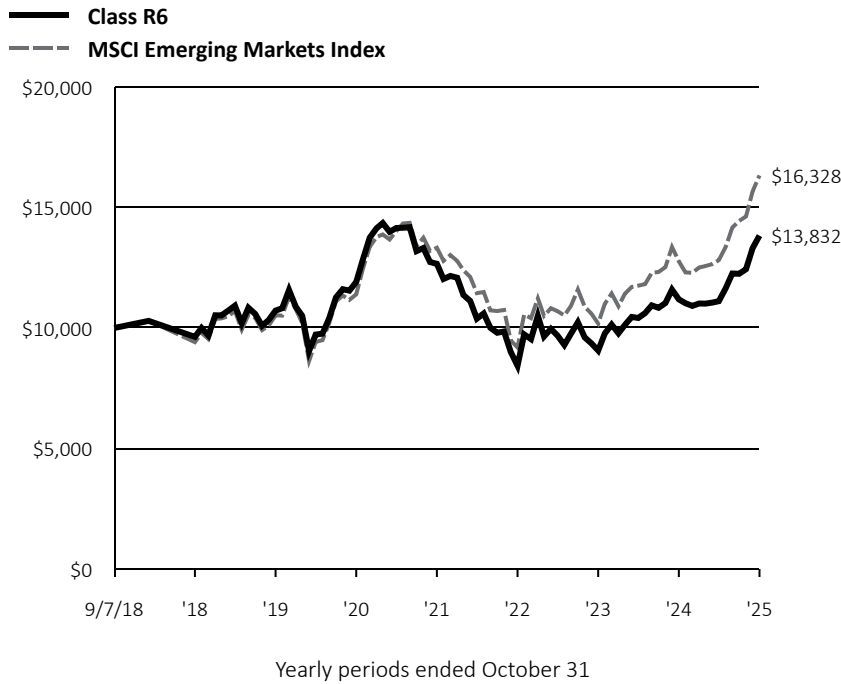

On the positive side, the Fund benefited from having an underweight position in India and a zero weighting in Saudi Arabia. Security selection in Taiwan also made a strong contribution to results thanks to holdings in a number of semiconductor companies, including Alchip Technologies Ltd. (1.2%), Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Co., Ltd. (14.7%), and Hon Hai Precision Industry Co., Ltd. (1.6%). Contemporary Amperex Technology Co., Ltd. (2.5%), a lithium-ion battery producer based in China, and SK Hynix, Inc. (3.8%), a South Korean semiconductor producer, were further contributors of note. Prosus NV (3.7%) — a Netherlands-based technology investment firm with holdings across the emerging markets — was also a top contributor in the annual period.

Percentages in parentheses are based on the Fund's net assets as of October 31, 2025.
