How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

Class C shares of the Fund returned 11.53% (unadjusted for sales charges) for the period ended December 31, 2025. The Fund's broad-based index, the MSCI World Index, returned 21.09% for the same period, while the Fund's additional, more narrowly based index, the Dow Jones Brookfield Global Infrastructure Index, returned 14.10%.

Individual stock selection and broader sector allocations each played a role in the fund's underperformance relative to the Dow Jones Brookfield Global Infrastructure Index.

With respect to the former, the Fund's holdings lagged the corresponding index components by the widest margin in the Americas utilities category. A position in PG&E Corp. (4.1%), whose shares traded down after a major wildfire in California highlighted the risks in the state, was the largest detractor in both the category and the portfolio as a whole. A zero weighting in Fortis, Inc. and an underweight in Consolidated Edison, Inc. (1.0%) further hurt results. On the positive side, Americas utilities was home to several of the Fund's leading individual contributors for the year: the Brazilian water utility Cia de Saneamento Basico do Estado de Sao Paulo SABESP (0.7%), CenterPoint Energy, Inc. (2.5%), and NiSource, Inc. (2.2%).

Europe utilities was another area of weakness, primarily due to an overweight in the Spanish electricity provider Redeia Corp. SA (1.5%). The Fund also experienced modest underperformance in Europe communications, largely as a result of a zero weighting in the Luxembourg-based communications satellite operator SES SA.

Selection in Americas midstream energy made a healthy contribution to relative performance. The Fund benefited from an underweight in the liquid natural gas company Cheniere Energy, Inc.,* which posted a loss for the year and trailed both its category peers and the larger infrastructure group by a sizable margin. Overweight positions in DT Midstream, Inc. (2.4%) and Williams Companies, Inc. (6.3%) also helped performance. Selection in Japan and European transportation aided results, as well.

In terms of allocation, an overweight in the underperforming Europe communications sector was the most notable detractor. An overweight in Americas rail contributed, as did an underweight in Americas midstream energy.

Percentages in parentheses are based on the Fund's net assets as of December 31, 2025.

Stocks may decline in value. Investing in foreign securities presents certain risks, such as currency fluctuations, political and economic changes, and market risks. Emerging markets tend to be more volatile and less liquid than the markets of more mature economies, and generally have less diverse and less mature economic structures and less stable political systems than those of developed countries. Any fund that concentrates in a particular segment of the market will generally be more volatile than a fund that invests more broadly. The Fund may lend securities to approved institutions. Companies in the infrastructure, transportation, energy, and utility industries may be affected by a variety of factors, including, but not limited to, high interest costs, energy prices, high degrees of leverage, environmental and other government regulations, the level of government spending on infrastructure projects, intense competition and other factors. This Fund is non-diversified and can take larger positions in fewer issues, increasing its potential risk. Please read the prospectus for details.
