How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

Class R6 shares of the Fund returned 3.75% for the period ended September 30, 2025. The Fund's broad-based index, the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index, returned 2.88% for the same period, while the Fund's additional, more narrowly based index, the Bloomberg GNMA Index, returned 3.39%.

The Fund delivered strong positive absolute performance for the 12 months as the Ginnie Mae market posted a positive return for the period.

During the period, interest rates declined and the US Treasury curve sloped more steeply upward, particularly in the second quarter of 2025 as the market anticipated that the US Federal Reserve (Fed) was poised to begin lowering its benchmark overnight lending rate. The Fund was well positioned for this movement in interest rates. Specifically, the Fund's performance relative to the Bloomberg GNMA Index was helped by an overweight stance with respect to duration and corresponding interest rate sensitivity as rates moved lower. In addition, an overweight to the shorter end of the maturity spectrum proved additive as the curve steepened. Finally, the Fund increased its overweight to mortgage-backed securities by increasing exposure to collateralized mortgage obligations (CMOs), adding to return in a rising market. These securities also trade at a yield spread to pass-through Ginnie Maes, helping to increase the Fund's yield and adding to relative performance.

Material detractors were limited. While additive overall, the exposure to CMOs modestly decreased the benefit to the Fund from the decline in interest rates seen over the period.

Fund Performance

Cumulative Growth of an Assumed $10,000 Investment

Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index is a broad-based flagship benchmark that measures the investment grade, US dollar-denominated, fixed-rate taxable bond market. The index includes Treasuries, government-related and corporate securities, fixed rate agency MBS, ABS and CMBS (agency and non-agency).

The Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index is a required broad-based index that represents the fund's overall debt market.

Bloomberg GNMA Index tracks fixed-rate mortgage-backed pass-through securities guaranteed by the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA). The index is constructed by grouping individual MBS pools into aggregates or generics which proxy for the outstanding pools of a given program, coupon and vintage.

The Bloomberg GNMA Index is a more narrowly based index that reflects the market sector in which the fund invests.

Index returns do not reflect any fees or expenses and it is not possible to invest directly into an index.

Mortgage-backed securities represent interests in “pools” of mortgages and often involve risks that are different from or possibly more acute than risks associated with other types of debt instruments. When market interest rates increase, the market values of mortgage-backed securities decline and volatility of the Fund may increase. When market interest rates decline, the value of mortgage-backed securities may increase, but could expose the Fund to a lower rate of return on investment. Bond investments are subject to interest-rate, credit, liquidity, and market risks to varying degrees. When interest rates rise, bond prices generally fall. Credit risk refers to the ability of an issuer to make timely payments of principal and interest. Investing in derivatives entails special risks relating to liquidity, leverage and credit that may reduce returns and/or increase volatility. The Fund may lend securities to approved institutions. Please read the prospectus for details.
